

SECTION II. MICRO SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE

SOCIAL WORK COMPETENCIES – COMPETENCE

Competence	It is vital for a social worker to practice within the scope of one's practice. This means that the social worker must inform Maynor of the scope and limits of the role as the social worker within the psychological services program. The social worker must be aware that Maynor is unique in his own way and he has a set of experiences and challenges different from anyone else. The social worker will provide Maynor with information about their role as a psychological social worker, which includes academic and emotional and psychological therapeutic services. The social worker will provide full disclosure about confidentiality and limits to confidentiality. Social workers respect and work in accordance with people's rights to confidentiality and privacy unless there is risk of harm to the self or to others or other statutory restrictions (IFSW). Social workers inform the people with whom they engage about such limits to confidentiality and privacy (IFSW).
